On April 4th, Food Shift recovered over 470 pounds of granola, lemonade and stuffing from Andronico's Community Market in Berkeley. The retail value of the food totaled $2,438 and was donated to St. Vincent de Paul. We are excited to expand our food recovery program with Andronico's in the coming months.

Help Food Shift gain valuable exposure on BART

Dear <<First Name>>,

I'm excited to announce that Food Shift has been selected to participate in the BART

Blue Sky Contest. Winners of the Facebook-based competition receive free advertising on BART trains and stations. Please vote and share with your networks. Last spring we won and created 4 ads which you can see here.

March was a big month for Food Shift with grant applications, interviews, speaking engagements and responding to an increasing demand for our food recovery services. While keeping pace with it all was exhausting, we're making significant progress and we're thrilled by the increase in attention on this issue and on our work.

The speaking engagements brought us to the David Brower Center in Berkeley, and to the Pachamama Alliance Monthly Gathering and Commonwealth Club in San Francisco allowing us to reach nearly 500 people with our message.

Spreading our message even further is the exposure we received from Good Magazine as we were selected as one of their 100 Global Innovators list for 2014! Scroll through the other profiles to learn about some amazing individuals who are making positive change around the world.

Please remember to vote for Food Shift in the BART ads contest. Thank you for believing in our work and being part of the shift!

"It is simply unacceptable in a society so prosperous as ours to miss the mark so widely in connecting food resources with glaring unmet needs. Food Shift is part of a growing effort to go farther and create something better. They are finding creative and effective ways to construct food systems that deliver health and sustainability to our communities. We are proud to support that work and we also know that we will share in the benefits. Keep up the great work!"
